'Go Hang Yourself' Day Gains Pace

Elderly & Sick Australians to risk Fines to Make a Point

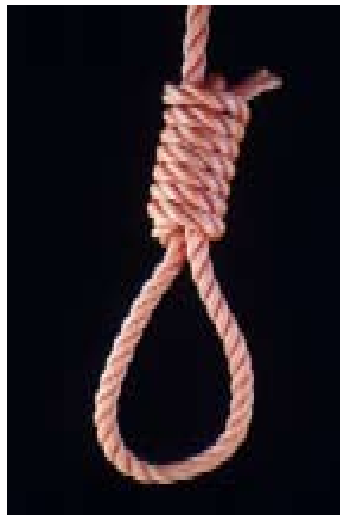

With January 6 looming as a would-be Doomsday for Exit, some ingenious ways to protest against the government's crackdown on Exit activities (that involve the Internet, Phone, Fax and Email) have been suggested.

One suggestion that has been posted in the Exit Forums is the 'Politicians - Go Hang Yourself' Day. Exit supports the idea of mass civil disobedience by elderly and sick Australians. This plan is bound to draw attention to the insidious nature of this new law.

Exit is therefore, delighted to announce that 'Politicians, Go Hang Yourself' Day will take place on Friday 6 January 2006. This is the day the Suicide Related Materials Offences Act becomes law. On this day, Exit members will be encouraged to Email, Phone or Fax a step-by-step guide on hanging to all politicians.

Members should send their correspondence to Prime Minister Howard and Justice Minister Senator Chris Ellison. This way, if Mr Howard or Mr Ellison should fall ill, or if they should find themselves in a position where death is a preferable option to their pain and suffering, they will know what to do about it.

In an ideal world, if unfortunate circumstances were to befall these politicians, they would only need to reach for the Peaceful Pill locked in the cupboard. Sadly, our world is far removed from this utopia. Exit expects that members' 'Go Hang Yourself Day' correspondence will contain the following information:

- Type of rope required and preferred knot
- Retail outlets where the rope may be purchased (is it available from Bunnings?)
- Details of the optimal length and thickness of

90+ year old Exit Members Awarded Honorary Membership

In the past 12 months since Exit began using a new member database system, we have noticed a change in the demographic of the Exit membership. Given the elderly profile of Exit members it is not surprising that we are regularly notified of the passing of Exit members. While any death is, of course, always sad news, it is not as sad, if we know that Exit has been able to help these members have the peaceful and dignified death that they desired.

At the other end of the spectrum, however, we have noticed an increasing number of people with birth dates in the 1930s and 1940s now starting to join. This perhaps means that people in mid-life are increasingly realising how little they know about their end of life choices. Perhaps they have watched their parents experience painful, undignified and drawn-out passings and want better for themselves.

At the current time we know little of motivations for joining Exit and this is one area that we hope to incorporate into our new membership brochures which will be available with the December edition of Deliverance.

Another trend that we are witnessing at Exit is the increasing number of our members in their 90s. On this note, Exit is offering honorary membership to all Exit members upon their 90th birthdays. As honorary members, these 90-plus generians will receive a gold Exit lapel badge. Most of all, their membership of Exit will become honorary (no donation required) from this point onwards. While there is a humorous side to Go Hang Yourself Day, there is also something deadly serious about it. Go Hang Yourself Day is designed to show the ludicrous nature of the government's EOL censorship legislation. By preventing rational elderly adults and adults who are seriously ill from accessing accurate, reliable information about their EOL options, the government is, in effect, condemning these same people to death by hanging.

Remember, hanging is the most common method of suicide in Australia. Yet hanging is a gruesome and miserable death. No one would actively choose to end their life by hanging if they could choose the option of a Peaceful Pill.

But rope is available and hanging works. If any of the politicians who passed the new Suicide Related Materials Offences Act are uncertain about exactly how to carry it out - they need only read one of the faxes or email they will receive from Exit members.

In light of the government censoring information about all other methods of 'self-deliverance', the suicide rate of deaths by hanging will surely rise. There will be blood on the hands of our politicians. A civil society like Australia can and should do better. Remember everyone sending a fax or email will, after 6 Jan, be subject to possible prosecution under the new law and subject to a $110,000 fine.

Let's see if this government wants to prosecute hordes of elderly and sick Australians for showing politicians up for the fools they are in passing such stupid legislation.

Editorial

In this month's editorial I want to focus on the role of medicine in Voluntary Euthanasia and take the opportunity to discuss some of the criticisms that have recently been levelled at Exit. Some in the movement believe that the Peaceful Pill Project is profoundly dangerous and irresponsible because it removes doctors from the decision-making process.

As a medical doctor, I am well aware that I enjoy a relatively rare set of privileges. On the practical side it has been quite easy for me to secure my own access to Nembutal. I can die if and when I want to, peacefully, and without seeking permission from anyone. This is true for all vets and doctors in Australia.

In the past I have also found myself placed in a gate-keeping role. I have been the one to decide whether others should be as lucky as I am, whether they should have this choice. During the short-lived Rights of the Terminally Ill Act, I was the doctor who could say "yes I will approve your application and grant you permission to die, or no, I will not approve your case".

I found this position difficult and it made me extremely uncomfortable. Just because I was fortunate enough to go to medical school, does not give me the right to usurp the deeply-held beliefs of rational sick Australians on the most fundamental question of all - should they live or die? I had to approve their cases and sign their papers. None of those using the ROTI law would have bothered with it or with me, if they had had a Peaceful Pill in the cupboard.

We are not talking here about the young, irrational, or mentally ill. We are talking about rational, (and for the most part elderly) adults who are well-versed in decision-making. Just as I would not deign to tell these people who they should marry, how many children they should have or what they should have for tea, so I will not and cannot take on the position of a paternal decision-maker.

Doctors do not necessarily know best when it comes to individuals' own end of life decisions. Doctors may provide part of the picture but there is no rational or practical reason why doctors should be in charge of the dying process.

This is why I do not believe the Peaceful Pill is a dangerous undertaking. People make responsible decisions all their lives. If rational elderly adults or people who are seriously ill wish to develop their own end of life options they should be able to. To take the attitude that doctors should administer and control VE is a profoundly patronising and selfish attitude. I will not and cannot support it. Rational, elderly and/or sick Australians deserve more respect and at Exit you get that respect. Philip Nischke

Exit Discussion Forums Take Off

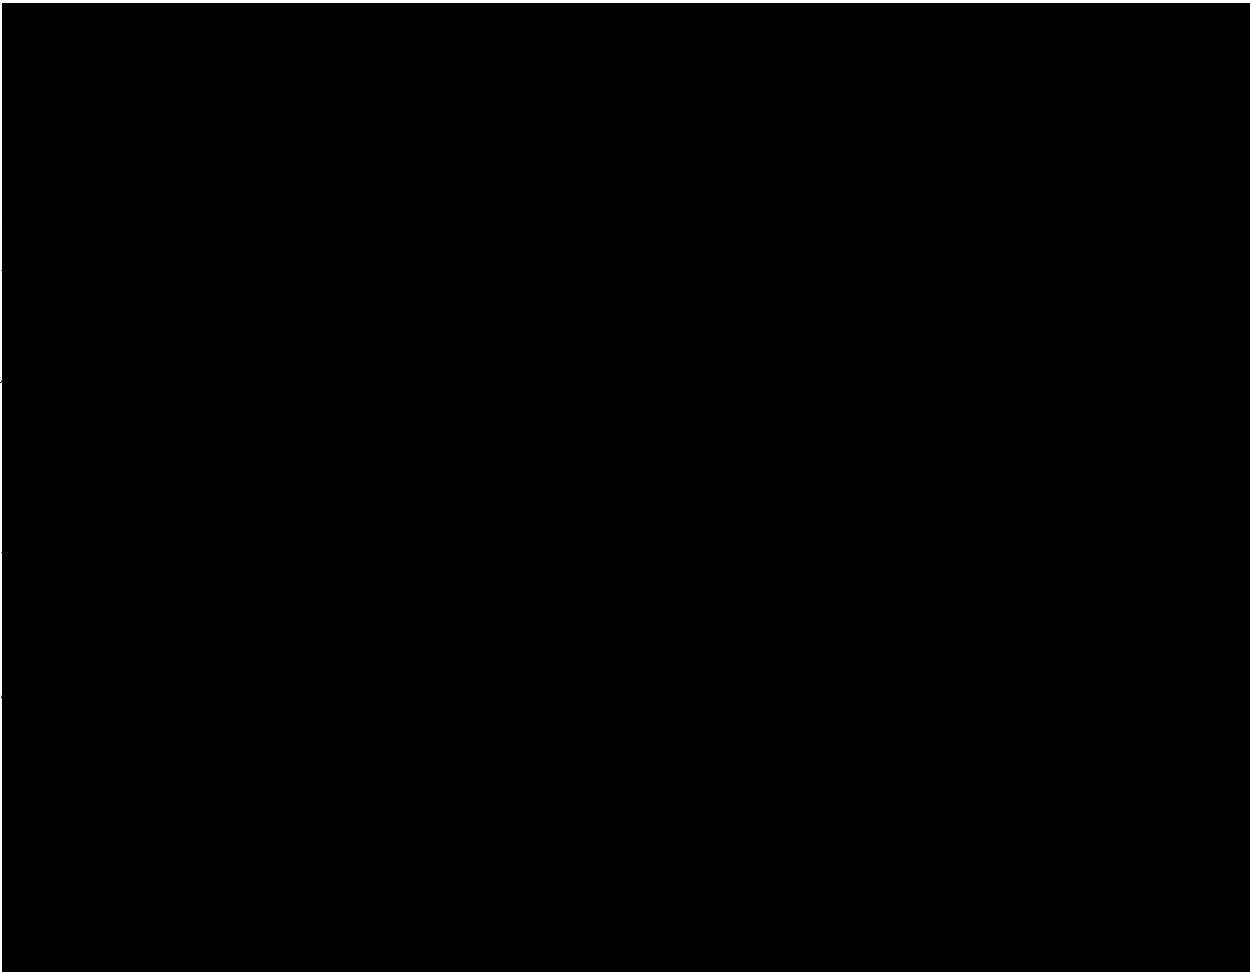

In recent weeks, the new Exit Discussion Forums at Exit's website (www.exitinternational.net) have attracted much attention becoming a useful and informative place for discussion about EOL issues.

To date, 70 Exit members have joined. Many have asked questions on issues as varied as the implications of the new Internet censorship legislation, the use of Helium and Exit Bags and the danger or otherwise of Temazepan sleeping pills. This means that the forums are providing Exit Members with an invaluable source of information. Members can often obtain same-day answers

It's Conference Time!

It is now less than 4 weeks until Exit's 3rd Biennial Conference in Brisbane. Although conference registrations will remain open until and including the days of the Conference there are less than 25 full places left.

With registrations now nearing 250, this is the largest VE conference ever held in the Southern Hemisphere. The logistics for such an event have been daunting but most threads are coming together. This week we signed the contracts for the video conference with Switzerland to bring Dignitas Director Ludwig Minelli (virtually) here to Australia.

Note: If you wish to attend the Conference breakfast you will need to complete the form on Page 6 and return it to Exit by the end of October.

Dont be shy. Come and join us for a glass of bubbly and a provocative address by Reverend Dr George Exoo. The presentation of the 2005 Bob Dent award for an outstanding contribution to the VE cause will also be made at the Breakfast. The Breakfast is to be hosted by former

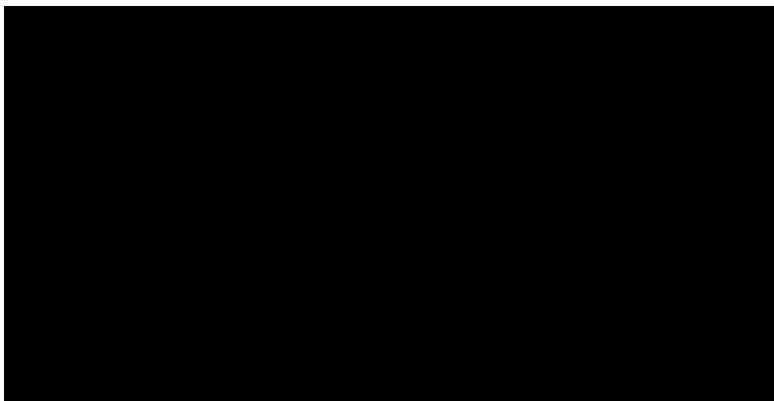

The Future of Exit

In September, Exit Director Philip Nitschke met with senior lawyers in Sydney and Darwin. From these discussions, we have decided that the Exit organisation will restructure itself so as to remain within the new Suicide Related Material Offences Law. It is clear that this law has been designed to curtail the activities of Exit and we are taking careful note of the legal advice provided so that we do not walk into the trap that is being set by the Federal government.

At the forthcoming Exit Conference we will announce the specific nature of this restructuring. Exit International will soon have 2 new faces – Exit Political and Exit Practical. The goal of these changes is to allow the ongoing function of the organisation and the provision of existing services to our members, while keeping Exit staff and members safe from persecution and prosecution.

The December edition of Deliverance will contain full details of the new-look Exit. Members of Exit should be reassured that the services offered by the organisation in providing real and practical
